8 Saboteurs Face Military Court Today Hold Foe Near Voronezh With Tank Assaults

NAZI AGENTS' SECRET TRIAL UNDER WAY

Guards Line Halls of Justice Department; Hearing Set 'In Boarded Room.'

Seven Generals Hear Evidence Against Men Landed From U-Boats on U. S. Coast.

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON—In a setting of utmost secrecy, guarded by heavily armed soldiers, police and secret agents, and walled-off corridors, eight German-born men went on trial for their lives today before a military commission sitting in the justice department.

The eight, accused of violating the articles of war by stealing into this country with intent to spread fire and destruction by Nazi sabotage methods, were rounded up by the FBI after they had been landed by U-boats on lonely beaches of Long Island and Florida.

So veiled with secretiveness was the commission proceeding—the first important one of its kind since the Civil War—that not even the fact of the starting of the trial was made known officially.

An informed person confirmed it, however, after it became obvious from the arrival of the prisoners, the seven generals who compose the commission, the prosecution and defense counsel and a number of witnesses.

The eight defendants, all German-born, though two had acquired American citizenship before the war, face a swift, unappealable decision. President Roosevelt barred all civil courts to them in a proclamation last week. The commission will decide by votes of at least 5 to 2, whether they are guilty, and if so, what their punishment is to be.

Argentina Recognizes Zone of Blockade in Atlantic.

BUENOS AIRES—(AP)—Argentina, while still insisting on her right to freedom of the seas, has ordered all Argentine merchant vessels to avoid the east coast of the United States which Germany has declared a blockade zone, a high official source said last night.

In the future, Argentine ships will dock instead only at United States ports in the Gulf of Mexico. This action was taken after Foreign Minister Enrique Ruiz Guinazu announced that Germany's sinking of the Argentine ship Rio Tercero off New York was a closed incident.

Argentina, which still maintains diplomatic relations with the Axis, had protested the sinking of the third attack on Argentine ships—and received a promise of reparation from the German government.

'Fuehrer' Held

Arrested in Mexico several days ago, former German-American band 'fuehrer' is shown as he was arraigned on a federal charge of violating the selective service act, after he had been returned secretly to the United States. Kunze's bail was set at $50,000. He is also under federal indictment for violating the 1917 espionage act. Kunze's arrest proved the startling gun in a drive which today had rounded up 29 officers and leaders of the band in the U. S. Fifteen have been arraigned and are under heavy bond.

BLOCKS SHIFT IN METER FUNDS

Fact That City Didn't Have Parking Machines in 1808 Quashes Proposal

Because no one had heard of parking meters back in 1808 when the city was deemed Central park, Councilman George C. Kyle's attempt to transfer of parking meter funds for uses other than traffic perished last night.

Howard G. Miller, president of city council, said that he had removed from council's hopper Kyle's bill asking for the privilege of soliciting a court opinion on the matter after getting a decision from City Solicitor Leslie K. Wagner.

Miller said that Wagner had ruled that Kyle's legislation was "useless" because the city could not successfully support Kyle's reasoning in the case.

Kyle said he was asking the transfer of $4,000 from the parking meter fund to the general fund to be used for improving the streets around Central park. Kyle stated that the city should be allowed to do this because several of the parking meters are located on Central park or "city property."

Present city ordinances forbid the use of parking meter funds for other than traffic purposes.

Wagner said that Kyle's argument would not hold up in court unless supported by the original deed which gave the park to the city.

"And seeing that no one knew about parking meters away back in 1808 when the original deed was signed," said Wagner, "Kyle would have no substantiating evidence. The deed says nothing about the city having the right to collect parking meter funds through its use."

Agreement Ended Butler Dispute, Attorneys Say

Willard S. Weekley's resignation as superintendent and teacher of the Butler village school was conditioned upon withdrawal of misconduct charges by the Butler school board, attorneys on both sides of the factional school fight said today.

It was an agreement, among parties concerned that the charges would be withdrawn and that Weekley would then resign, James V. Will, one of the attorneys for the complainants, and John L. Catlett, attorney for Weekley, said.

However, in taking formal action, the school board's resolution filed in board records, said that parties filing the charges "have asked leave to withdraw and dismiss the same," and that Weekley "has submitted his resignation."

FDR WARNING PRESAGES NEW MOTORING CUT

President Declares Tires To Be Requisitioned 'If Necessary.'

CAMPAIGN EXPECTED

U. S. Officials Believed To Be Preparing More Drastic Controls.

(By United Press)
WASHINGTON—President Roosevelt's warning that the government may have to requisition every automobile tire in the country today was expected to touch off another campaign for eliminating motoring as usual.

For months officials have been warning the public that extraordinary measures should be taken to conserve the tires now on automobiles. There may not be enough rubber for military needs, they have said, let alone civilian needs.

Government officials were believed to be preparing motorists now for more drastic controls over those precious tires. Mr. Roosevelt made the first move by telling his press conference yesterday what may be ahead for motorists if world conditions get worse than they are now.

The president said the entire nation could go without tires and, if it becomes necessary to regulation tires to save the country, he will do so. He emphasized that he was concerned about saving the country rather than saving rubber and gasoline.

Government officials some weeks ago proposed nationwide gasoline rationing as a rubber conservation measure, but so much opposition to it was raised that it was deferred until after the current rubber salvage program is completed.

Mr. Roosevelt said the rubber and gasoline problems were almost hopelessly interwoven, but that he was still clinging to the hope that a method would be found to separate them.

HELPING U. S.

Canadian Army, Air Units Stationed in Alaska.

VICTORIA, B. C.—(MNS)—Disclosure that Canadian army units as well as squadrons of the Royal Canadian Air Force now are stationed in Alaska to aid U. S. troops was made today in a statement issued at Victoria by Canadian Air Minister C. G. Power.

Power, with Air Marshal L. S. Broadbent, arrived in Victoria on a tour of Alaska and western Canada to inspect coast defenses. Principal object of the tour, Power said, was to visit the chain of airports built through the northwest to Alaska.

Difficulties in developing the northwest air route, the air minister said, have been overcome and it is now in full operation and "proving of inestimable value in reinforcing Alaska."

Bond Payroll Deduction Plan For City Workers Causes Stir

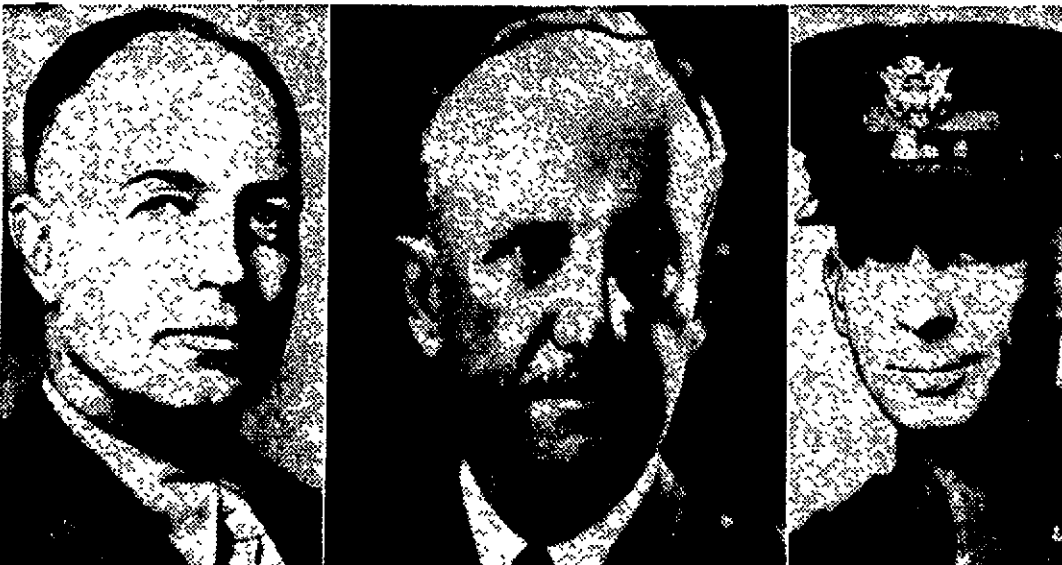

Adoption of the voluntary payroll deduction plan for salaried city employees to permit them to buy war bonds on a regular schedule will be studied by council as a committee of the whole.

This was decided at last night's council meeting, as the aftermath of a series of confusing incidents.

Council referred the idea to a committee after hearing the details of the plan outlined by Paul M. Eliot, chairman of the Richland county war savings bond committee, and after receiving a petition signed by 85 of the 210 salaried employees of the city.

Eliot appeared before council after he had received a letter from Mayor William J. Locke advising him that council had been petitioned (Continued on Page 3, Col. 8)

Hear Evidence Against 8 Nazi Saboteurs

Here are the seven members of the military commission named by President Roosevelt to try the eight alleged Nazi saboteurs seized after landing from U-boats. The commission is headed by Maj. Gen. Frank R. McCoy, veteran of the Spanish-American War Battle of San Juan Hill and also a member of the court-martial which tried Brig. Gen. William Mitchell. Other members are Maj. Gen. Walter S. Grant of Ithaca, N. Y.; Maj. Gen. Blanton Winship of Macon, Ga., former governor of Puerto Rico; Maj. Gen. Lorenzo D. Gasser of Lykens, O., a former deputy chief of staff; Maj. Gen. Guy V. Henry, of Fort Robinson, Neb.; Brig. Gen. John T. Lewis of Rockford, Ill., and Brig. Gen. John T. Kennedy, commandant at Fort Bragg, North Carolina.

U. S. Order Perils City's Summer Street Program

Federal O. K. Needed Before Projects Can Be Started, City Told; Materials Restricted.

If the improvement of at least seven city streets, scheduled to be resurfaced as part of the city's summer streets program, is carried out, it will be done only if the federal government gives each project its stamp of approval.

This came to light today when Service-Safety Director Fred B. Wolff received a letter informing him that federal restrictions had been placed on the use of bituminous materials, needed for the improvements.

Director Wolff said that Carl H. Stander, president of the Mansfield Asphalt Paving company, had informed him that no deliveries of asphalt bituminous material can be made after July 22 without government approval.

The service director said that this new order would result in a possible delay in the city's plan to cooperate with the state highway department in the improvement of portions of U. S. Route 42 and 42-A within the city as well as other street projects.

Director Wolff said that the restriction order would cause possible delay in the proposed resurfacing of Bartley avenue, Glessner avenue and Highland avenue. At least four city streets are included in the U. S. Route 42 and 42-A project.

Lucas Puts in Chlorinator; Boil Water Order Holds.

While a chlorinator was being installed at the Lucas village reservoir today, residents of that community were urged to continue boiling water for drinking purposes because of contamination found in the water system.

Dr. William B. Wild, city-county health commissioner, who issued the "boil water" warning yesterday after receiving reports on tests showing the water was contaminated said that Lucas officials had borrowed a chlorinator from Belleville and would put it into operation as soon as possible.

The health commissioner warned residents to comply with his order until it is determined that the chlorinator was operating properly. Contamination was believed to have been caused by seepage into the distribution system during repair work which has not been completed yet.

3,000 Germans Reported Dead as Hitler Admits Resistance But Says Gap In Red Line Widened; Flying Patrols Slash at Rommel Army In Egypt.

(By Associated Press)
Marshal Semyon Timoshenko's armies, recoiling after the initial shock of an assault by 200,000 German troops, were pictured in Soviet dispatches today as checking the 120-mile Nazi break through on the heights west of Voronezh and inflicting terrific losses on the invaders.

Red army headquarters ignored an official German claim that Voronezh had fallen, declaring the battle was still raging before that key city on the Moscow-Rostov railway.

"Fierce battles continued to the west of Voronezh," a Soviet war bulletin said.

"In one sector, a large German force attempted to capture a height defended by Soviet tank detachments. Our tanks met the enemy steadfastly."

The communique said more than 3,000 German dead littered the battle areas and 35 tanks were destroyed.

A bulletin from Adolf Hitler's field headquarters asserted that strong Russian forces had been encircled behind the Voronezh front and that a gap in the Soviet lines had been widened.

Conceding that the Russians were still fighting before Voronezh, the Nazi command declared Red army counter-attacks north-west of the city failed.

Briefly, the German communique noted that Soviet attacks in the Orel sector, 200 miles below Moscow, were continuing. The Russians were apparently pressing a counter-offensive around Orel in an attempt to relieve the fierce pressure of the German drive against Voronezh.

The latter, if successful, might split Russia's central and southern armies and cut off vital communications to the Caucasus oil fields.

Dispatches to Red Star, official Soviet army newspaper, declared the Russians were holding grimly to their new lines and strongly counter-attacking in some sectors.

COMMANDER: Officials Hint American Urged as War Boss

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON—Some high inter-Allied personages here speculated today on the possibility that an American—perhaps General George C. Marshall, chief of staff of the United States Army—might some day become supreme commander of all United Nations land, air and sea forces throughout the world.

So far there is no official move toward creating a supreme commander. But it can be said that some important people who refuse to permit use of their names, either expect or hope for one.

Assuming the job went to an American—which both British and American sources here do assume—it might not necessarily go to Marshall. Other possibilities include Admiral William D. Leahy and General Douglas MacArthur. Leahy, while 67, generally is considered one of President Roosevelt's closest military advisers.

Since retiring as chief of naval operations, a few years ago he has served as ambassador to the Vichy French government. Recently he left the White House with the statement that the president had "some kind of employment" for him.

General MacArthur might be a contender, not only for his military skill but because of the worldwide acclaim that has grown out of his defense on Bataan.

In fact one of the reasons for having a supreme commander is the big supply of leadership talent. As one of the ranking inter-Allied officials interviewed for this article put it:

"You might say the United Nations had a football team—Stalin and Chiang Kai-shek at ends, MacArthur at center, Wavell at guard, Roosevelt at quarterback, Churchill at fullback, and similar (Continued on Page 12, Col. 8)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN EGYPT—(UP)—American tanks manned by American crews roared into action "with a terrific punch" against German tanks on a wind-swept sand ridge in Libya and a boy from Arizona fired the first shot.

When the battle was over, four German tanks were blazing wreckage on the sand. Most of their crews were dead.

The Americans came back from the clash with all of their tanks and without serious casualties.

One Abner of Tucson, Ariz., was the first American to fire a shot from an American tank against a German tank in this war, according to the best accounts of the fight.

THE WAR TODAY

By DE WITT MACKENZIE

(Wide World War Analyst)

As the Nazi Napoleon begins to make the weight of his great offensive felt, a lot of folks are beginning to take refuge in the remark that, after all, the Allies can lose the Caucasus, the Middle East and Egypt and still win the war.

That's a terribly dangerous idea to be pursuing. There is, of course, a modicum of truth in the assertion, but it represents the rankest kind of wishful thinking—and it's an invitation to complacency.

I'm not one of those little faith who believe that the Allies are doomed to defeat in this vast theater which strategically is one of the most vital of the whole world. Our peril is very great and we certainly shall lose this territory unless we make a mighty effort and fortune favors us. But we definitely have a chance to hold our ground as things now stand.

Should Hitler gain his objectives, however, the Allies would (barring perhaps one contingency) be faced with the grim alternatives of losing the war or seeing it protracted for many long years, with no man able to foresee the end.

The contingency which would offer deviation from that black prospect would be the successful establishment of a powerful Allied front in western Europe before Hitler was able to capitalize on the vast resources and strategic advantages which he would have gained by his conquest. Such a front would have to be thrown into action quickly, because the Nazis would acquire strength fast after seizing the oil, minerals and foodstuffs.

While present indications are that the Allies aren't yet ready for a land invasion of western Europe, still it strikes me that they might be impelled to jump to it suddenly if Hitler's present offensives, either against Egypt or against the Russians, should jeopardize the whole Middle Eastern set-up. In any event, one would expect the United States and Britain to inaugurate a terrific bombing offensive against German cities in an effort to force withdrawal of German strength from the Russian front.

This whole picture grows out of the premise that if Hitler can't break through to fresh resources, he will be beaten. If he can reach those resources, he can repair his war machines, and his chances of winning the war will be good.

Should he gain his present objectives, he not only would acquire resources but he would cut the Allies off from them in that theater. Russia would be badly hampered if she lost her grain fields and oil wells in the Caucasus.

The Soviet would be pretty much in the most unhappy position of China—her home resources cut to the bone, and virtually isolated from the outside world. Even now Russia's main contact with the Allies is through the Arctic ports of Murmansk and Archangel and the Persian gulf, and Persia would fall with the Middle East.

Nazi possession of the whole Eastern Mediterranean and Middle East would, of course, bring the European Axis powers and Japan together. India would be open to invasion, and the Axis front would be solid from the Pacific to the Atlantic. You can fill in the rest for yourself.

WPB WARNS OF RATIONING ON TYPEWRITERS

Urges Businesses To Turn Machines Over For Government Use.

(By International News Service) WASHINGTON—Asked to sell all standard typewriters that can be spared to the government, the nation's business establishments today face possible rationing of the machines unless they co-operate in the program.

WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson announced that production of all makes of typewriters will be halted by the end of this year and appealed to 25,000 of the country's largest users of typewriters to relinquish some of their machines for government use.

In what was considered a warning of possible requisitioning, Nelson said:

"Your careful consideration and cheerful co-operation with this program is urgently solicited so that the necessary procurement may be accomplished by purely voluntary means."

Accompanying Nelson's letter was a request from William M. Harris, chairman of the WPB's office machinery and equipment procurement committee, asking for an inventory of all typewriters held by the 25,000 firms.

Nelson said that the army and navy alone needed over 600,000 machines. He listed these demands for standard makes in good condition:

Army, 448,502; navy, 199,096; maritime commission, 12,600; board of economic warfare, 47,390; lend-lease, 40,125; and other government departments, 105,000.

The typewriters will be purchased on a basis of their trade-in value as of Feb. 1, 1941. Typewriters which can be spared by civilian industry for government use may be sold through any of the typewriter agencies dealing in new machines.

The WPB chief said the typewriter "is an essential piece of equipment on every bomber."

Every battleship normally carries 59 typewriters, every aircraft carrier 55, every cruiser 30, and destroyers, seven.

"Although even these supplies are being cut in half," said Nelson, "those assigned to ships and planes are essential for carrying on. Services of our vastly expanded fighting forces."

WORK PROCEEDS DESPITE FIRE

$10,000 Blaze Hits Akron War Plant, Many Stay Right on Jobs.

(By Associated Press) AKRON — Assembly of aircraft parts proceeded today after a $10,000 fire destroyed much of the rubber sealing strip along the south door of Goodyear Aircraft Corp's main hangar air dock, former home of the dirigibles Akron and Macon.

An Acetylene welding torch being used by workmen caused the fire last night, acting Fire Chief Frank Verotzky said after he investigated the damage.

Flames from the torch ignited the rubber slapping at the bottom of the door, then climbed 211 feet to the top of the building, which has no inside supports. It is the largest structure of its kind in the world.

Commander C. V. S. Knox, resident naval inspector, said it was likely machine tools used in making aircraft parts had been damaged by water. The city's entire fire fighting apparatus, auxiliary firemen, police and local civilian defense workers helped quench the flames.

Workers at the other end of the 1,175,000-foot dock continued working during the fire, which was brought under control within an hour. The company employs about 3,000 persons on each of four shifts.

START ARMY PAY DEDUCTIONS, FAMILIES GET AID IN NOVEMBER

(By Associated Press) WASHINGTON—The army already has started deducting from soldiers' pay checks the contributions they are required to make to dependent wives and children under the family allowance bill which became law on June 23, although payments to the dependents will not start until November.

Government cash benefits are being added to these pay allotments, but both will be allowed to accumulate into lump sums ($250 in the case of a dependent wife) before first payments are made on Nov. 1. The law specified payments to be effective as of June 1, but delay in setting up administrative machinery will postpone initial payments for four months.

Thereafter the government checks will go out monthly. Although formal application blanks will not be available until about July 23, Col. Thurston Hughes, of Louisville, Ky., head of a staff of 1,255 set up to administer the new law for the army, has ordered post commanders to accept informal applications to establish a date for making monthly deductions.

Since deductions and allowances may accrue from June 1, those in the service on that date started or were due to start, contributing July 1. Those entering the service after June 1 will have deductions start from the pay of the month following their application for benefits.

RAPS ARNOLD ON PATENT CHARGES

Advisor Declares U. S. Had Access To All Processes.

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—George E. Folk, special patent advisor for the National Association of Manufacturers, accused Assistant Attorney General Thurman today of "ignorantly or deliberately" misleading congress and the public about patents and industry's war production.

"Although Arnold has led congress and the public to believe that patents have held up the government, the fact is that the government has long had power to have anything produced for it at any time, in war or peace, regardless of patents," he said in a report to the NAM.

"No patent holder, if he had tried, could have stopped the government from using his patented inventions in any kind of industrial expansion for government purposes."

WLB MEMBERS STUDY LIVING COST EFFECT

Discussion Follows Roosevelt Statement Steel Pay Boost Would Hike Expenses.

(By United Press) WASHINGTON—Some members of the war labor board today indicated that if the board orders a wage increase for "Little Steel" workers at least part of it may be payable in war bonds.

Board officials emphasized that no decision has been reached either on the wage or the union shop demands of the United Steel Workers (CIO) in the four little steel companies.

President Roosevelt's statement at his press conference late yesterday that a steel wage increase would be a factor in increasing members. Mr. Roosevelt said he certainly was against any further increase in living cost, but would not say whether he favored or opposed a steel wage increase.

One board member said a wage increase payable in bonds would have no effect on living costs since it would be paid immediately to the purchasing power of the workers. The bonds could be converted to cash after 60 days, but he said he believed most workers would hold them except in cases of urgent need.

WLB Chairman William H. Davis said recently that he would favor payment of wage increases in war bonds where the increase was not needed to maintain adequate living standards. He pointed to the shipbuilding stabilization agreement as an example.

The steel workers now earn an average of approximately $1 an hour and had an average annual income of $1,500 last year. The fact that Davis said that was sufficient to maintain the workers' health and reasonable comfort. It found, however, that an increase would be justified on a basis of giving the workers an equitable share "of the national pie."

The panel said it would not favor an order requiring workers to accept war bonds against their will.

ILLNESS FATAL

Surviving are his widow, Anna; one daughter, Mrs. D. W. Harris of Ashland; and five sisters, Mrs. Pearl Hanes and Mrs. Herbert Hohn, both of Lodi; Mrs. Doris Swaney of Prospect; Mrs. Richard Barnes of Homerville and Mrs. F. R. Reed of Mansfield.

The fact that Davis said that was sufficient to maintain the workers' health and reasonable comfort. It found, however, that an increase would be justified on a basis of giving the workers an equitable share "of the national pie."

The panel said it would not favor an order requiring workers to accept war bonds against their will.

Board members, during a public hearing of the dispute last week, questioned CIO President Philip Murray, who also is president of the steel workers, whether he would be agreeable to at least a partial payment in war bonds.

Murray indicated he would have no objection to at least part payment of back wages—the board has said the increase would be made retroactive in February—in war bonds. Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, argued against the suggestion.

'Unemployables' Now Getting Jobs, Report Indicates

COLUMBUS—(U.P.)—Evidence that industry is absorbing many persons formerly classified as non-employable appeared today in State Welfare Director Charles L. Sherwood's report that the number of June relief cases was smaller than last winter's list of "unemployables."

A survey last fall showed 32,782 persons unable to work because of advanced age or physical defects. However, the June relief case load was estimated at only 31,600, Sherwood said.

The previous nine-year low of relief cases was 24,693 in May. Sherwood estimated the June relief cost at $956,000 against $974,504 in May and $1,181,335 in June 1941.

The cost for the first six months this year was set at about $6,881,101, a $2,851,845 drop from the corresponding 1941 period.

RELAX BAN

French Churches Permit Bare-Legged Women at Services.

VICHY—(U.P.)—Silk hose have become such a rarity in France and woolen and cotton stockings are rationed so rigidly that the Catholic clergy has lifted a ban against bare-legged women entering churches.

The clergy said there had been no ruling by the Vatican but indicated that the action conformed to the practice at St. Peter's, Rome, where bare-legged women are plentiful.

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

A LITTLE while before midnight every night, just when the crowds are growing thick on Broadway and the floor shows are starting and theaters are letting out, a maroon and white trailer filled with girls in uniform rides past the statue of Father Duffy in Duffy Square.

The girls inside salute the granite statue. Then the trailer turns right on Broadway, bound for the waterfront, for the dark and lonely places of the city, for the secret places where sentries stand their watch.

The Father Duffy Canteen is rolling. "Rolls" six nights a week, come rain or come straight. Through its counter-like windows, the girls in the trim blue uniforms dispense sandwiches, coffee, milk, chocolate milk, cookies, candy, chewing gum, cigarettes and smiles—all free—to soldiers, sailors and marines. It's a tussle whether the boys like the sandwiches or the smiles better.

The soldier's call the canteen "Duffy's Tavern." They talk about our ranks in their eyes, they compliment us on our cuisine; and as we ride away they say "thanks" with much more meaning than the word implies.

One sergeant down at the Battery said to me: "I've been a soldier 25 years, in the last war and in this, and I've never before had anything happen to me like this canteen."

Certainly at the moment the canteen is the only mobile unit of its kind. Named in honor of the late Rev. Francis P. Duffy, pastor of Holy Cross church and famous World War chaplain of the Fighting 69th Regiment, it is a unit of the United States army ambulance corps.

I first saw the outfit in action when Col. Gertrude Lawrence invited me to meet her after a performance of "Lady in the Dark" and accompany her on her night on duty. She had obtained special permission from Major Corelli for me to ride in the canteen, and early civilians are not permitted inside the trailer—because she thought it would be a new and exciting experience for me.

She was right. When we caught up with the canteen at a midtown armory, I was intensely interested.

Chatter Corner

Margaret Cayford, Country Day school director, writing from her home in Burlington, N. J., that she prepared to take shelter when the air raid alarm sounded July 4th only to learn that the siren blew every Saturday to let the people know it was working order.

Seen at the Dolly Madison and Young Democratic clubs' picnic—Juanita Miller rushing around seeing that the guests were supplied with everything and Atty. A. S. Beach lending assistance by passing out sandwiches—Arlene Harris playing "catch" during the ball game.

By 1 a. m. I was itching to help hand out the coffee and carry trays to the guards. By 3:30 a. m. I knew this was the most satisfying form of war work I'd yet seen. On the way home I'd say to Gertrude: "Do you think I could do this, too?" The next day, I joined.

It seems that everyone along Broadway and in the neighborhood is in the spirit of Broadway has given generously and warm-heartedly to the Father Duffy canteen. Everyone from Peggy Hopkins Joyce to Monty Woolley has come forward with generous donations.

Where do we go? Well, that's a military secret. We are, under army orders. We go to barracks in the city, that you probably do not know exist, places where "trouble shooters" are on duty all night in case of emergency, air raid, sabotage. We pull up outside, ring our canteen bell that is a little like a ship's bell, open the window which the food can be passed and the trays handed, and "soup's on!"

The boys know, now, when to look for us, and they form in line full of smiles and chatter and questions like "what, no steak?"

When there are sentries who cannot move from their posts, we leave the sandwiches and "setups" for them.

We work quickly. As the last boy takes his sandwich, we close the windows and roll away to the next stop—maybe an armory, maybe a loft building, maybe a pier. At some of our stops, there are men who would have nothing to eat—not even a soup of coffee—from six at night until seven in the morning, if "Duffy's Tavern" did not pass by in the lonely hours.

The girls who are going out on the trailer make the sandwiches themselves, in assembly line fashion, and my Friday night "plate tone" has become an expert it turns out 300 sandwiches in less than an hour.

I'm becoming pretty expert at sandwich-spreading myself now. You see, in our "army," even the colonel does K. P. duty!

The soldiers seem to get a big kick out of the captain's bars and colonel's eagles on our uniforms. One colored sergeant eyed, my shoulders, grinned widely, and giggled: "Are you a sure enough colonel?"

"I am indeed," I said with the attempt at sternness. "And sergeant, do you usually giggle when you meet a colonel?"

"No, ma'am," he said still grinning. "Not usually. Only when the colonel is of the opposite sex."

REDS CHECKING NAZI OFFENSIVE AT VORONEZH

dictated uneasiness in the Nazi capital over Rommel's position. Furious new Axis raids on Malta, the British Mediterranean island stronghold, indicated that convoys were rushing reinforcements across the sea to Rommel. Evidence of the Axis attempt to cripple Malta as a threat to Rommel's trans-Mediterranean supply route was reflected in a report last night that 24 raiders in 24 hours.

Presumably Rommel was awaiting the arrival of these reinforcements before attempting to lunge on more in his drive toward the Nile and the Suez canal.

On the Russian front, the Soviet command acknowledged that Red army troops had retreated under heavy pressure before Starý Oskol, 65 miles southwest of Voronezh, where a second German spearhead was knifing eastward toward the River Don, but declared the Nazis advanced at the cost of severe casualties.

"In one of the (Starý Oskol) sectors, the Germans hurled about 200 tanks and a large infantry force into the attack," a Soviet communiqué said.

"Our men mowed down the Hitlerites by point-blank fire," eighty German trucks were disabled."

Soviet dispatches said in two months of offensive action in the Crimea and the Ukraine, the Germans had gained less than 15,000 square miles compared with the 335,000 square miles overrun by the invaders in the first two months of the war.

Axis Launches New Air Attack On Malta

VALETTA, Malta.—(AP)—Axis bombers have launched new mass assaults on Malta, the British Mediterranean stronghold which menaces the supply lines to Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's North African army. Twenty-one Axis planes were shot down and many others damaged during the past 24 hours, a communiqué stated today.

Sixteen Axis planes were destroyed on Monday as a new aerial blitzkrieg was launched against the island fortress in an obvious effort to screen convoys en route to Libya with supplies and reinforcements for Rommel's stalled desert army. Attacks have been mounting daily since Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck's eighth army checked the Axis advance in Egypt west of El Alamein, 70 miles short of Alexandria.

Berlin Claims 4 More Convoy Ships Sunk

BERLIN (From German Broadcasts).—(AP)—The sinking of four additional merchantmen in a "British-American" convoy reported attacked on the Arctic supply route to Russia was claimed today by the high command, which said altogether 32 ships of the convoy of 38 had been sent to the bottom. (There was no confirmation of the German claim from any other source.)

A communiqué repeated the statement in the special war bulletin yesterday that a heavy United States cruiser was sunk in the attacks.

LONDON.—(AP)—United States merchant ships were in the Russia-bound convoy which the Germans claimed yesterday to have attacked between Cape Cod and Spitzbergen, an authoritative British source said today, but he added that he was unable to say whether United States warships formed part of the escort.

(A special communiqué from Hitler's headquarters yesterday said the convoy consisted of 38 merchant ships and battleships, cruisers, destroyers and corvettes and that one heavy American cruiser and 32 ships were sunk by combined air and submarine action.)

Chinese Circle Jap Advance Force

(By Associated Press) Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's Chinese armies reported today they had closed in around Japanese advance forces which penetrated the towns of Feng-hang and Changshu in a new drive aimed at capture of the Szechuan railway.

With the Chinese still clinging to a 25-mile sector on the Chekang-Kiangsi, the Japanese were attempting to seize the Kiangsi-funan loop for a part of their projected rail trunk linking Shanghai and Singapore.

FDR Calls Pacific War Council Session

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—With differences of opinion existing among some of the leading members of the United Nations on the grand strategy to be employed against the Axis, President Roosevelt today summoned a meeting of the Pacific War Council.

The differences of opinion do not represent any risk in the unity of purpose of the United Nations to defeat the Axis, but merely a conflict of ideas on how that objective should be achieved. The Chinese feel the United Nations should concentrate on knocking Japan out of the war first. Their reasons are:

1. Japan is weaker than Germany, and can be defeated first if

China is given adequate aerial support.

2. Unless Japan is crushed soon, she will be able to consolidate her position in the Far East and might possibly knock China out of the war.

3. A belief that Russia can hold out against Germany this year, and would benefit by having Japan defeated first because the United States could then devote all its strength to smashing Hitler. The American, British and Russian governments still believe that stopping Hitler must be the first objective. Unless Hitler is stopped this year, they fear he might defeat Russia, gain control of the Middle East and place himself in a position to wage a long defensive war in Europe.

However, a difference of opinion also exists between the British and the Russians as to how Hitler should be stopped.

Jap Raid Brings Only Slight Damage

GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Australia.—(AP)—Except for a raid by 16 Japanese bombers which caused slight damage to the airfield on Horn Island, in the Torres Strait between northeastern Australia and New Guinea, General MacArthur's headquarters communiqué reported today only "intermittent air reconnaissance" on the south Pacific front.

At Canberra, Australian Army Minister Francis Forde announced that air support control units—providing a radio-telephone link between ground commanders and planes—have been created for effective frontline army-air co-operation.

Urge Bastille Day 'Revolt' In France

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Free French officials said today that underground resistance groups have broadcast an appeal to the people of unoccupied France to make Bastille day—July 14—a day of demonstration against the German invader.

Copies of the appeal have been forwarded to the French national committee (De Gaulle's headquarters) in London.

Those in the unoccupied zone are called on to display the French tricolor, to walk about their cities wearing their colors and to assemble and sing the Marseillaise, the French national anthem, at 6:30 p. m.

Reports reaching Free French headquarters here indicate, it was said, that resistance in France is steadily increasing even in the face of stern measures adopted in both the occupied and unoccupied zones.

resignation and that the board then withdrew the charges. That statement was based on the wording of the resolution of the board passed. There was no porter present at the meeting; due to the fact that there was no advance notice of the meeting. All parties concerned had waived formalities requiring advance notification of the special school board session.

Publication of the fact that there was an agreement that the charges would be withdrawn first is made by The News-Journal in fairness to the parties involved. BOND PAYROLL PLAN CREATES COUNCIL STIR

Mayor Says 95 Per Cent of Employees Sign, Petitions Show 40 Per Cent.

council last night, were those of Mayor Locke and Service-Safety Director Fred Wolff.

In his talk to council, explaining the deduction plan, Eliot said he had been advised that City Auditor Paul L. Kelley had taken the stand that an additional clerk would be necessary in the auditor's office to handle the work, and criticized Kelley for this alleged stand.

Kelley was not present at the meeting last night but today denied ever having stated that an additional clerk would be necessary to carry out the deduction plan.

Eliot said today that he had talked with Kelley yesterday and admitted that the city auditor had told him he would "be glad" to carry out the plan if city employees indicated they desired it.

Eliot said that he had based his criticism of Kelley upon a letter from Mayor Locke in which the mayor stated that "council was reluctant to pass legislation on the problem because the auditor insisted he needed an extra clerk."

Kelley stated today that he had never been consulted before yesterday on the deduction plan for city employees, nor how it would be handled. He recalled, however, that there had been a discussion of the plan at an open meeting war bond campaign some time ago, when it had been suggested that WPA help might be employed to handle bookkeeping and records in such a set-up.

Kelley said he had pointed out then that if additional help was to be assigned to his office, it would have to be a bonded employee—as all employees now are—and that he could not agree to giving WPA employees access to city records.

He reiterated his willingness to handle the deduction plan, and said no additional help would be needed.

So far as could be learned, no city employees had expressed opposition to the payroll deduction plan, which is entirely voluntary, but many said they had never heard of nor seen a petition asking its adoption, despite the mayor's statement to Eliot that such a petition had already gone to council, signed by 95 per cent of the city's salaried employees.

Many workers said they had already filled out pledge cards, promising to buy stamps and bonds and setting up their own quotas for so doing.

Police Chief Thomas M. Bell was one among the department heads who were asked to solicit signatures yesterday in a last-minute effort to swell the number of names on the petition. Only two members of his department had signed a petition when council met last night. Bell explained that he had not been able to see many police department members in the time available.

Most of the signatures were gathered from the fire department and workers in the street and garbage departments. Their names were signed just before those of the mayor and service director.

In opposition to the alleged claims of Auditor Kelley that an extra employee would be needed, Eliot cited reports from several Mansfield industrial firms that the entire work of deducting contributions from employees' salaries required only five or seven hours every two weeks.

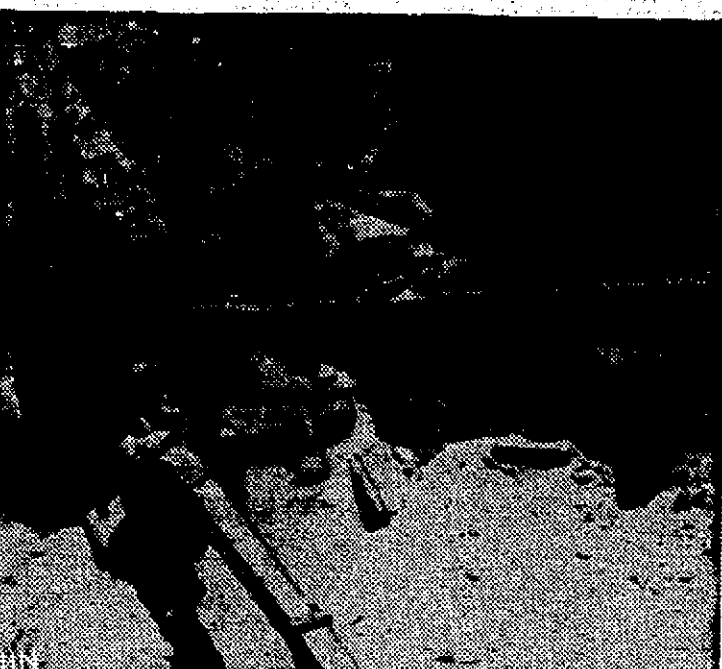

"I don't see why arrangements couldn't be made to have this work done in the auditor's office, without hiring an extra clerk," said Eliot.

The bond sales chairman said that the Treasury department supplied record cards which simplified the bookkeeping procedure.

"To get our bond sales program through successfully, we're going to need the co-operation of every one, even the city auditor," said Eliot, in closing his remarks to council.

Eliot later requested council to approve a resolution allowing the erection of a billboard in Central park to support the sale of bonds. Councilman James R. Anderson

ORDER PERILS STREET JOBS

U. S. Approval Required on Each Project, City Told In Materials Ruling.

Wolff, calls for the approval of the state highway department and the U. S. Public Bureau of Roads before permission will be given for the use of bituminous materials.

Last week, Vance Grimes, Ashland division engineer, said that the new order which went into effect on July 1 would possibly cause a delay in the improvement of state routes within the city.

Include in the U. S. routes 42 and 42-A project are Park avenue east from Ashland road to Central park, the streets around Central park, Hedges streets from Park avenue to First street, and East First street from Hedges to Main street.

Last night city council passed a resolution giving the state highway department permission to proceed with the project. At the same time, it reduced the share of the cost to be paid by property-owners on Park avenue east from about $12,000 to $10,000. No assessment will be levied against property-owners on Hedges or First streets.

Council also authorized the resurfacing of Glensser avenue from Marion to Sturges avenues at a total cost of $7,000 with $2,400 being paid by the property-owners. Although this measure had been formerly suggested by Councilman George O. Kyle without any assessment on property-owners, no discussion was held or objections raised at last night's meeting.

The resurfacing of Highland avenue from Park avenue to the beginning of brick pavement on Highland was also authorized and $700 was appropriated for the project.

Another project to resurface Barclay avenue was approved by council last month. Resurfacing projects are also being considered for McPherson street, and the Bowman street approach to Johns park.

TELLS HOW U. S. BLASTED TANKS

Writer Brings Observer's Account of Terrific Desert Fight.

Capuzzo, overlooking El Adem. Three General Grant tanks, manned by 18 Americans, were operating with British tanks not far away.

There was a clash, with Italians, Germans and British all joining in a clanking desert melee which was partly obscured by sand clouds.

They roared forward, sliding and zig-zagging down the incline. Ahee opened up with a blast from his 75-millimeter gun. The Americans picked a vulnerable enemy tank and let him have it until he burst into flames. Another one then came into the range of their sights.

One after another they blasted the German tanks to a halt and saw some of them burst into flames, until they had picked off four.

The arrival of American tank crews in the desert was not known until the battle began. They drove to the front lines from a tank assembly point in British trucks with British drivers and then met the British tank brigade with which they moved into the front line.

The purpose of the action was to give the Americans training in actual battle practice, and thus they were in the role of "combatant observers" when they swung into action against the enemy.

An American observer who watched the battle said:

"We've proved that the General

Grants are excellent in every respect and we have learned some very valuable lessons."

Other American observers and tank experts emphasized that the tank was superior to anything the Germans possess, and said this was shown by the fact that four Axis tanks were knocked out without a loss to the Americans.

So far as I have been able to learn, the Americans have not participated in any fights since they tried out their punches that day.

Another observer expressed respect for the German 88 millimeter guns and admiration for the courage of British crews.

"The American tanks certainly packed a terrific punch but the Nazi's 88 millimeter gun is redoubtable and he has plenty of them," he said. "I want to say this, that I never saw braver men than the British tank boys. They know no fear and they fight on and on."

EASING UP

Legislators Consider $600 Income Tax Exemption.

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—House ways and means committee indicated today that their tentative vote to reduce personal income tax exemptions for single persons from $750 to $500 may be modified to make the exemption $600.

If the committee so revises the personal exemption schedules, back pay raises in the army and many household domestics would remain in the non-income tax paying brackets.

The committee's drastic tentative action coupled with its approval of tax collection by withholding at the source would have required tax deductions from the wages of soldiers and many housemaids.

ference, two other officials denounced "driving as usual" in reference to the gasoline rationing program on the east coast. Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson and Deputy Petroleum Coordinator Ralph K. Davies charged that "driving as usual" was exhausting valuable gasoline supplies in the east and was preventing war workers from obtaining the fuel needed to travel to and from work.

They appealed to every conscientious motorist to curtail driving as much as possible "regardless of personal inconvenience."

Other rubber-gasoline developments:

1. Mr. Roosevelt reported that the yield of the scrap rubber collection campaign was better than the lowest pre-campaign estimates and not yet near the highest estimates. In a report released from the White House Monday, collections up to last week-end were 334,293 tons.

2. Registration for the east coast's permanent, coupon gasoline rationing will begin tomorrow in some 30,000 schools.

Democracy Being 'Advertised'

AMERICA and democracy are now getting some of the "advertising" that had been rather sadly neglected for several decades.

"The desire for liberty and freedom can be strengthened through advertising," declared President Roosevelt in a recent message to the annual convention of the Advertising Federation of America.

He was complimenting advertising men on "the splendid spirit of co-operation which they have shown in the past year" and said that advertising has "a patriotic place in the nation's war effort."

Advertising, as it possibly should be more generally realized, has a broader meaning than mere "paid space" in newspapers, magazines and other forms of commercial publicity.

It applies to any sort of requirement to "give notice, make known, or announce publicly."

Some earlier advisers of the president, including Rexford Tugwell, had an idea that advertising was a waste of money and had no place in new schemes for a "planned economy."

But it would be only in a totalitarian state, where there is no competition and where everyone must do as he is told, that advertising could be dispensed with as a part of dictator rule.

Even in its restricted sense, advertising has been a tremendous force in extending free enterprise and raising living standards in the United States, through spread of comforts and conveniences made possible by mass production of widely advertised commodities.

Had the advantages of democracy been as well "advertised" during the past half century as is now being done, and as should continue to be done, it is quite unlikely that alien "isms" would have been able to gain a foothold in this country or hemisphere.

In promotion of the national war effort American newspapers gladly give much space to "advertising"—in the broad meaning of that word—realizing that advertising not only makes possible the freedom of the press but that it is essential to the preservation of democracy.

Excessive Taxation Dangerous

THE LAW of diminishing returns applies with full force to industrial taxation. Once taxes pass a certain level, the springs of investment and employment dry up, industry falters, tax revenue itself declines—and the tax literally defeats its own purpose.

A large eastern power utility recently presented an important brief on taxation to the house ways and means committee. It pointed out that utilities, which are stringently regulated in every phase of operation by government, are always legally limited to a small return on invested capital. They do not and cannot have true excess profits—and, in any event, their so-called "excess profits" cannot accurately be determined until normal taxes and surtaxes are deducted from their revenues. Yet the pending tax bill, as now proposed, would compute the "excess profits" tax before the deduction of the normal corporate taxes.

All businesses, large and small, are facing similar problems. In many cases the threatened burden of taxation will be greater than the ability to pay. Even while industrial output, due to the war, is at an all-time high, industrial net profits, with few exceptions, are small and are declining.

The hard fact is that industry and the millions of ordinary people who own industry must make some return if they are to keep in business and progress. And another fact is that, misapplied, the excess profits tax can virtually ruin a large segment of American industry, to the actual detriment of the war effort.

Butler School Head Resigns

NOW that the Butler school controversy has been brought to conclusion by the resignation of Superintendent Weekley, it may be hoped that some sort of lesson has been learned by participants in this unhappy episode, which will be beneficial in the future operation of the village schools.

The chain of events which led up to the resignation included a "strike" by school children, acts of violence, destruction of property, spread of bitterness among neighbors, gossip—in fact about everything that would tend to disrupt a village and its school system.

It was said by Mr. Weekley in his resignation: "It is apparent to me that because of the activities of this group (those who opposed him) and their utter lack of co-operation in school matters, my usefulness in the Butler school system is at an end."

Lacking reliable information, and entirely without bias, it will impress outside observers that this conclusion is justified and that Mr. Weekley does well in ending such a disagreeable employment.

For those who wonder why there are wars, and why people of different nations cannot evolve a peace formula, pondering the extent to which the fine American village of Butler has been torn by internal strife over a school superintendent may be helpful in revealing the elements of "human nature," which, when sufficiently multiplied, cause wars.

As for the ordinarily well-behaved village of Butler, and its large majority of fine people, it may well be hoped that "it doesn't happen again."

Another 'Farm Boy' Success Story

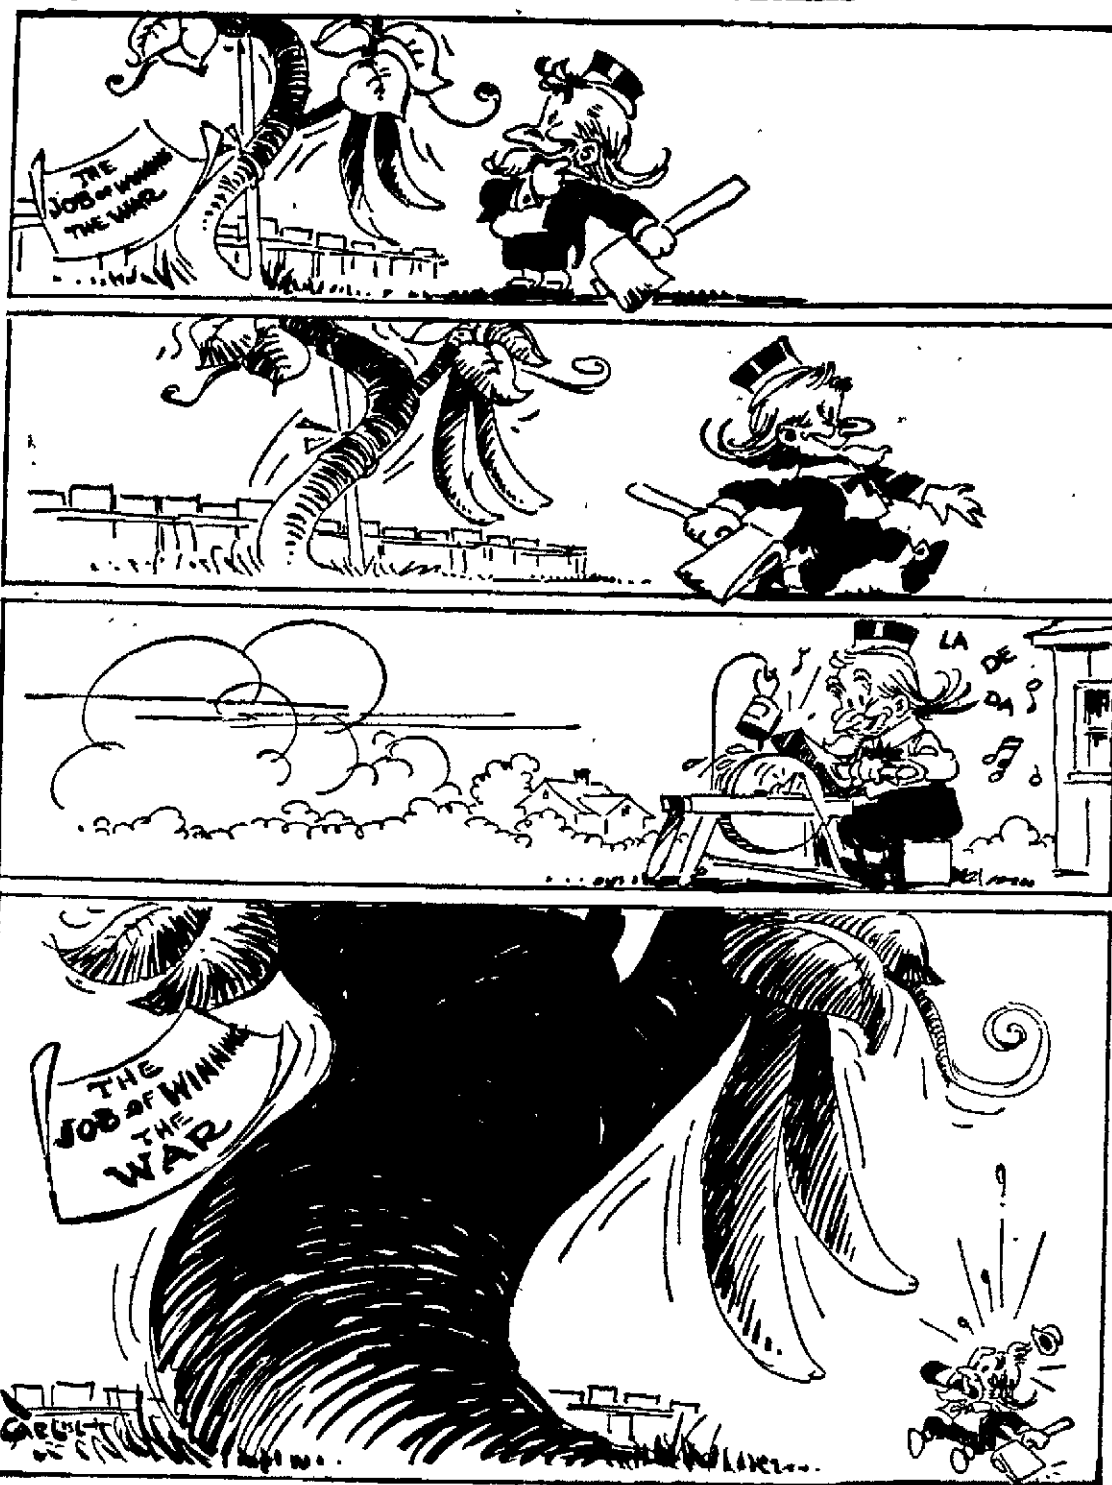

THE DEATH of Daniel Willard, long-time president of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, removes another of the fine Americans who achieved in a notable way after starting life "on the farm."

Probably because of the city to the north that dropped the confusing name of "Chicago Junction" to become "Willard," there has been more than ordinary interest in Daniel Willard throughout this area, with a feeling of acquaintanceship which his kindly nature encouraged.

While Mr. Willard's early experience was in a period of rapid railroad development, his advancement from a track laborer to the presidency of a great railway system typified the encouragement of initiative and the opportunities for individual attainment which democracy affords, and for the preservation of which America is now engaged in war.

Now is the time that it takes more than prayer to keep weeds out of the Victory garden.

SAM AND THE BEANSTALK

Slow Pace In Congress Campaign

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

CAMPAIGNING for seats in the senate and house of representatives at the coming congressional election is exceedingly slow in warming up this year.

It might have been expected that the war would make it especially glib, but it appears to have had the opposite effect. If the conflict had been progressing highly satisfactorily from the standpoint of the democracies, including our own, the Democrats undoubtedly would be ballyhooing our successes, but they can't very well do so in the face of the present situation.

The Republicans, on the opposite hand, can't afford to be overly critical lest they give an impression of opposing the administration emergency at a time when it's every good citizen's duty to give it his fullest support regardless of party considerations.

For the G. O. P. to win enough seats to give it a senate majority is of course impossible, since the senators are elected only one-third at a time and the Democrats have so wide an existing numerical superiority that they'd still have a small one even if the Republicans triumphed in every 1942 contest, which they'll be far from doing.

Small Turnover Likely. The representatives being chosen all at once, the lower house can be flopped, theoretically, although that would involve an enormous and highly improbable turnover.

The Democrats would appreciate, say, half a dozen representative additions, as a popular expression of confidence, and that many on their side would pretty well satisfy the Republicans, too, just as a token to them.

The fact is that I don't think the G. O. P. would like control of the representatives' chamber at this juncture; it would force 'em into the position of an opposition party. That's a role that they can't afford to be identified with, no matter how the war develops. If we pick up and come out all right, they'd be accused of having delayed the happy outcome and, in the event of the other unbelievable sequel, they'd be blamed for it.

The anti-administration element does make a modicum of capital out of the charge that the New Dealers, by over-concentrating on economic policies, neglected preparations for national defense, and that that neglect's what we're paying for now. It's a point that it's premature to argue as yet, though.

Now, I'm discussing what party leaders say in Washington, where such matters are discussed discreetly. Actual candidates, out on the so-called hustings, perhaps are more outspoken. A party leader looks on to the future. A candidate's first thought is to be elected in November—not for 1944 or some such time.

It seems that the candidates are concentrating mostly on the taxes the public'll have to be paying in 1943 and subsequently. Suppose one of 'em is a Republican, appealing to the voters, as an opponent of some Democratic lawmaker who's just cast his ballot for the levies Washington's legislating at the moment. Those voters'll be precisely beginning to sense the pinch as they go to the polls Nov. 3, and it may influence 'em.

Rubber Stamps? There also has been plenty of talk to the purport that our current congress consists of a lot of rubber stamp members, who've done just as they're told—and look at Pearl Harbor and the Aleutians and Axis submarines off our Atlantic coast and the outlook in Egypt and on the Russian front and in China!

And now we're footing the bill for it! That'll be the candidate's story.

November will tell what the rank-and-file of the electorate'll say.

Timely Editorial

Weed Out Traitors.

Enemy agents and disloyal Americans should be dealt with severely. They are as alike as two peas. American citizenship means nothing to a traitor, and should mean nothing to a jury. Anyone helping the Axis could hardly be called a citizen, and should be treated as an active enemy alien.

The sooner we weed out the spies and the disloyal Americans the fewer will be the ship sinkings and interior acts of sabotage.—Toledo Times.

Success In Stopping Nazi Drive Through Egypt Offset In Russia

—By LOUIS F. KEEMLE

BRITAIN'S success in stemming the Rommel drive in Egypt has been offset by Germany's advance to the Don river and Voronezh, key industrial center on the railroad artery leading to Rostov and the Caucasus.

Although Moscow fails to confirm it, the German high command's claim to have crossed the Don and captured Voronezh probably is true or will soon come to pass, judging from the rapidity of the German advance eastward from the Kursk area.

The news is not good. It is the most important German gain since last autumn, barring the fall of Sevastopol, and tactically it may be more important than that. Sevastopol, which already has been made useless as a Russian Black sea naval base, apparently was eliminated as a possible threat from the rear to a German drive across the Kerch strait to the Caucasus.

Sevastopol could have been by-passed and the Kerch drive still carried out, but its capture releases a large German force for action to the east.

THE FALL of Voronezh is a blow to the Russians for two reasons. It means the cutting of the oil supply to Russia's armies by way of Rostov, to which it is piped from the Caucasus. The oil still can be shipped from Baku across the Caspian sea to Astrakhan and thence by rail, but it is a longer and slower route.

Equally serious is the severance of Marshal Semyon Timoshenko's line of communication with Rostov, which, as gateway to the Caucasus, is the primary German goal in the present drive.

It is doubtful that the Germans will attempt to continue their drive eastward from Voronezh, since there are no important objectives in that direction. Marshal Fedor von Bock presumably will hold there and concentrate his forces, the bulk of which he apparently used in the Kursk offensive, against Rostov.

CUTTING the railroad will seriously hamper the north-to-south mobility of Timoshenko's army and hamper the reinforcement of Rostov. The fall of Rostov would open the way to the Caucasus from the north, to be accompanied by a movement from Kiev.

The threat to the Georgian and Baku oil fields thus becomes much greater. Hitler's path to the Middle East fields from Africa may possibly have been blocked by the British stand in Egypt, although the menace there is still great, but if he cannot go one way, he is in a position to try it from another.

Watching Trends

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—Assuming that there are a few direct questions and answers which will reduce the manpower problem to its A-B-C's, the War Manpower Commission has attempted to do same by giving the following replies:

Q. How many men will be required in the labor army—and on off the farms?

A. By the end of 1943 and early in 1944, we must have 20,000,000 workers in direct war production; 12,000,000 more on the farms.

Q. How many men will be taken by the armed forces?

A. There are slightly over 2,000,000 now under arms; there may be 4,500,000 by the end of the year; perhaps 6,000,000 to 7,000,000 by next year end; and if the war continues, at least 10,000,000.

Q. How many war workers will be women?

A. There now are close to a million and a half women doing war work. Probably 4,000,000 more will be needed in the next two years.

Q. Where is this war labor force coming from?

A. Conversion and suspension of peacetime industries will provide approximately 8,000,000; a half million more will come from the farms; around 400,000 from the professional ranks; a million and a half from the presently unemployed; and some 2,000,000 from the present reservoir of housewives, youths and over-age (retired) workers.

Q. Who is in charge of seeing that this is brought about in an orderly way?

A. The War Manpower Commission, headed by Paul V. McNutt, which is working with the various government labor agencies in the Labor and Agriculture departments; Selective Service; the War Labor Board, and scores of training agencies and private industrial set-ups.

Q. Will there be a labor draft?

A. Probably not. In some specialized professional fields, such as the medical profession, it may be necessary if present trends continue. But at the moment, it is considered likely that the voluntary movement to place every man and woman in the job for which he or she is best fitted and most needed will be sufficient.

Q. What industries will need the most additional workers?

A. Civilian employment in navy yards, army arsenals and air depots will be increased at least five-fold; aircraft workers quadrupled; shipbuilding and army and navy ordnance tripled.

Q. How many "new" workers will be needed?

A. Approximately 11,000,000 in industry; 2,500,000 on the farms (during harvest periods).

Q. How many "trades" are short of manpower?

A. At least 10. For example: 50 tool designers are needed for every one now employed; 25 tool-makers for every one now working; 22 machine machinists, etc.

Q. Where does one apply for a wartime job?

A. At the offices of the United States Employment Service. These are located in all large cities, in all state capitals, and most of the county seat towns.

Listen World! 'Ah Still Suits Me'

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

KNOW how you feel when you're taking the count for a while... all the gimp gone out of you... washed up and blue... sick of everything?

Pretty hard for any hope to break through when you're in a mood like that—takes a large-size miracle to revive your old confidence and enthusiasm. Yet, unless you can revive them, you're on the skids for good. But where'll you get what it takes? You dial the radio, read the front page news, turn the pages of your favorite magazine. No dice! And then, if you're lucky, something will happen, as it did to me the other night, when out of the darkness there came rolling a great song—"AH STILL SUITS ME!"

Ever hear of it? Perhaps you didn't approve of it much if you did. Dusk Southern gem'un from the Deep South, lolling in his armchair, with his irritated little Missus giving him the works.

"Always naggin'," grunts he. "Shuah I see naggin'," shrills she, and proceeds to relate her woes and his shortcomings. Which includes practically everything that a low-down, triflin', lazy, No-Good can commit.

"Ah don't see no money," wails the lady.

"Ah'n't got t' be none, honey," responds her lord and master, amiably agreeing with her whole indictment. Then adds:

"BUT AH STILL SUITS ME!" No-good scallawag? Yes. "Honey" was right. But in those five words he's laid a philosophy that we're all needing badly these days. He isn't boasting—anything but! He isn't trying to defend himself or his reprehensible ways. He does not advise anybody to admire or copy his ways. But deep inside his secret self he's holding fast to the one thing that makes life possible even for a scallawag.

"AH STILL SUITS ME!" Strong and unshaken by adversity, unappalled by the mean makeshift of life and the consequences of his own cussedness, he still can smile and make that confession of faith. Yes, he sure is a No-Count... never has been much good... maybe never will be. But there's one thing nobody can ever take from him, and that is HIS BELIEF IN HIMSELF.

"AH STILL SUITS ME!" There are times when that hits us all right where we live. Poetry and preachments fall us, nagging and squalling leave us indifferent.

Changed Attitude. The man who left home to lick the world at 16 now has a son of 17 who seems a child too young to join the navy.—Akron Beacon Journal.

War Drama.
The superior marksmanship of a Tennessee mountaineer astounds the latter's superior officers in "Sergeant York," Gary Cooper's starring picture at the Ohio, but it was nothing compared to their surprise when he captured 132 Germans almost single-handed. The factual story of Sergeant Alvin C. York's life in the hills and in the Argonne forest continues through Friday at the Ohio. Margaret Wycherly, Joan Leslie and Dickie Moore are in the cast.

Makes Debut.
Mansfield's movie starlet, Diana Jeanne Schultz, makes her first appearance on a local screen in "I Was Framed," opening today at the Madison. Michael Ames and Julie Bishop are co-stars in the picture that deals with gangland efforts to "get" a newspaperman bent upon exposing crime. Known professionally as Patty Hale the young actress has the role of the newsman's daughter. The co-feature, "Joan of Paris," is a stirring story of Paris under Nazi occupation. Michele Morgan and Paul Henreid, French stars, top the cast.

Rolling Comedy.
The rollicking story of two charming members of European royalty who earn their keep by acting as professional guests of wealthy Americans is depicted in "We Are Dancing," the Ritz attraction co-starring Norma Shearer and Melvyn Douglas. Based on Noel Coward's play, "Tonight at 8:30," the picture has Reginald Owen, Florence Bates and Cecil Patrick. "Father Steps Out," with Frank Albertson and Jed Prouty is the second attraction.

Western Drama.
Roy Rogers ignores his usual cattle rustling opponent to bring an underworld chieftain to task in "South of Santa Fe," opening Thursday at the Park. Made an outcast in his own community by the interloper Rogers devises a method to free the west of the chieftain's breed. Gabby Hayes and Linda Hayes are in the production. Zane Gray's story, "King of the Texas Rangers," with Herbert Rawlinson and Allan Lane is the co-feature.

Miss Kathleen Mulvihill, braves the July heat to model the new United States Army nurses' cold weather uniform. It consists of specially-constructed combination gloves and fur-lined mittens, a fur-lined water repellent wind breaker, a heavy woolen muffler and a fur-lined cap.

WEDDING TAKES PLACE IN ST. LOUIS CHURCH

Miss Jody Marquis Becomes Bride of Karl Eldon Johnson In Ceremony July 3; Parents of Couple Attend Service.

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM T. MARQUIS, 219 Euclid avenue, have returned from St. Louis, Mo., where their daughter, Jody, was united in marriage with Karl Eldon Johnson of Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., on Friday, July 3. Dr. and Mrs. C. J. Love of Lorain, parents of the bridegroom, also were present for the ceremony which took place in the First Presbyterian church at 8:30 p. m. Rev. Rearick officiated.

The altar was attractively decorated with palms, ferns, flowers in beauty baskets, and candelabra. The couple was unattended. Wedding attire of the former Miss Marquis consisted of a white tailored suit with a white feather toque. She wore a pearl necklace and carried a white prayer book. The bride's shoes were orchid to match her orchid and ivory corsage. For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Marquis chose a black and white ensemble with matching accessories. She had a corsage of gardenias. An all-white ensemble was worn by Mrs. Love, whose corsage was an orchid.

After a brief reception at the church, the newlyweds and the immediate families went to the Colonial Village hotel, near St. Louis, where the wedding dinner was served. While her husband is stationed at Fort Leonard Wood, Mrs. Johnson will reside at the hotel. Mr. Johnson, who is in the army engineering corps, expects to enter officers' training school soon. At that time, the bride will return to Mansfield to make her home temporarily with her parents.

Mrs. Johnson was graduated from Mansfield Senior high school. Mr. Johnson is a graduate of Lorain high school and DePaul university at Greencastle, Ind., where he became a member of Alpha Tau Omega fraternity.

Bingo was played with prizes being awarded to the Misses Pearl Cairns and Mildred Heaton. No definite date was set for the wedding, but plans are being made for some time in the early part of August.

HOROSCOPE

For Thursday, July 9.
THIS SEEMS to be an urgent time for concentrating the energies as well as the assets for the purpose of withdrawing from a static or crystallized state of affairs and orienting them in the direction of new achievements and fresh objectives of no mean order. Many factors favor this decision and large corporations or political bodies may be found ready for clever, original and well-organized propositions, but use tact, diplomacy and subtlety or shrewdness. The public or community may also approve and cooperate. Young persons may find much pleasure, affection or romantic attachments as well as business opportunity.
Those whose birthday it is should endeavor to solidify their interests and evaluate their assets in an effort to be swift and decisive in the direction of major achievements, with increasing and enduring results, even though new tactics, ideas and fresh objectives may be the inspiration. With tact, diplomacy and cleverness, shrewd and ingenious proposals will find cooperation from large organizations as well as public interests. The young should partake of these exceptional opportunities and as well find much pleasure in friendships, social activities or romantic adventure, possibly courtship and marriage.
A child born on this day should have originality, ingenuity, and exceptional imagination or intuition, accompanied by subtlety, deep insight and sound reasoning ability. It should have romantic, social and domestic happiness.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers) By ADELE GARRISON

It was the second time within two days—the first had been my talk with my brother-cousin, Jack Bickett—that the memory of Hal Meredith had come vividly to my mind, although in this surprising interview with Katharine his name had not been mentioned.
Hal Meredith, handsome, brilliant, aristocrat who had loved Katharine since he was an interne and she a student nurse in the same hospital—I could see him now as on that day long ago, standing with Katharine under the big elm near the farmhouse, pleading I knew for the happiness he thought, and with some justice, that she was quixotically denying him because of mistaken loyalty to the husband who apparently had gone out of her life.
Jack is my "brother-cousin," the only blood kin I have. My early affection for him was exceedingly strong, and he still is very dear to me. Yet through the years of his inexplicable silence to Katharine, my heart has been hot within me for his cruel neglect of her.
Even the remorse and high resolve for atonement Jack had showed, when I penetrated the disguise which he thought made it safe for him to return to the United States and complete his dangerous enterprise, had not lessened my feeling that Hal Meredith, were he given the opportunity, would make Katharine happier than Jack could.
But I could not bring these things out into the open now. Katharine's question, "You see, don't you, Madge, what I must do?" still hung between us.
"Yes, indeed I know, dear girl," I said. "You want to search the hospitals."
All Night Vigil.
"You dear, understanding soul!" she said. "That is what I must do, and I must start at once. It will be an all night vigil."
I knew now what I must do. In some way I must keep her until arrival and her intention. It was impossible to shake her conviction that Jack had written that pitiful summons to her, but I was convinced that the letter was a clever forgery.
If that were the case, Katharine's liberty, perhaps her life, would not be worth a farthing if she should go alone on her contemplated tour of the hospitals.
In all probability, I deduced, the brains of the gang had surmised that Jack was the queer servant working for Professor Diswell at his Connecticut mountain home.
And of course hospitals would suggest Katharine to them—Katharine, with her long nursing experience and consequent entree to the hospitals. They might well have sent her the cleverly concocted message, expecting her to react exactly as she had done.
But whether she found Jack or not, it was not on the cards for the gangsters to permit her to return safely to the hotel.
I knew, however, that no ordinary excuse would deter Katharine, even for a minute. In my desperation I resorted to what in ordinary circumstances I would have dubbed a despicable ruse. I rose to my feet, spoke tremulously: "Pretends To Be Dizzy."
"Won't you have even a cup of tea?" I asked, letting my voice trail away faintly, then I staggered and apparently saved myself from falling only by catching at the back of the nearest chair.
Katharine was at my side in an instant, holding me up, and characteristically spoke with gentle firmness as she propelled me toward my bedroom door.
"You must lie down at once," she said, "and tell me where you keep your medicines. You must have some . . ." she named a drug "for that dizziness."
"I'm sorry," I said faintly, my head inert upon the pillow. "But I have none. If you'll telephone the drug store they'll send some right over. The telephone is in the living room."

New Hosiery Is Sheer, Alluring

Left to right, knit rayon hose; ribbed cotton stockings; black mesh hose.

By SUSAN BARDEN (International Illustrated News Writer.)

Some months back just about every grandma, matron and debbie in the United States was in a terrific dither over the inevitable shortage of silk stockings. Women all over the country forsook legs without glamor for the duration of the war.

But anyone who ever questioned the American style industry's ability to make fashions grow where only shortages grew before was in for a pleasant surprise. Designers and manufacturers have been hard at work since the first ban on Japanese silk, and they have evolved some nifty choices for daytime, afternoon and night that are just as good, if not better, than the articles they are substituting.

Authorities Give Suggestions
At a recent hosiery fashion show the latest news was modeled and described, and in case you are still doubtful, this department hastens to assure you that the styles we saw were every bit as alluring as the most expensive sheer silk stockings.
The three different types that are shown in the above photographs were designed by Gotham. The hosiery authorities suggested nylon for evening wear, rayon or mesh for street or daytime wear and vertical ribbed cotton stockings for country, marketing, bicycling or walking.
The model with the bag of vegetable is wearing beige vertical ribbed cotton stockings that match the color of her sleeveless sweater. With these are worn fabric sandals with low, comfortable heels.
The girl in the lightweight summer suit is wearing black mesh stockings which are very smart with her black accessories. These are a very good choice for women who wish their legs to look thin. But for those who already have slender legs the mesh hose in lighter tones is preferable.
The "stocking of the future," a gossamer sheer web in very fine rayon is shown in the last picture.

MANIPULATING A MISFIT
With your partner bidding two suits and you bidding the other two, you have one of the most delicate situations which can confront you. Instead of reckoning then that, since he has the two in which you are weak, No Trumps would make a good declaration, it will pay you, if your hand is pretty strong, to feel out every possibility by giving the greatest possible amount of information about your distribution. This is especially so if you have a six-card suit, as even two cards of it in his hand may fix you up.
The ninth with the heart finesse or a diamond lead, he had no chance.
Playing at 6-Spades, South lost nothing except one diamond trick, giving him a just reward for good bidding.
Notice how at Table 2 North made it clear he had five hearts and four clubs, by rebidding his hearts after showing the clubs, and then not rebidding clubs, but calling No Trumps on his fourth turn. Better still, notice how South's rebid of spades showed they were a card longer than diamonds, and that the diamond rebid showed they were of at least five cards, consequently the spades at least six cards. That told North he could support spades with two cards, which he had.
Tomorrow's Problem.

Brenda — Will You Step Out With Me Tonight?
I know I've been a awful grouchy not taking you any place lately. But after standing all day at my new job, my feet darn near killed me with callouses and burning. Now I've reformed — or rather my feet have — thanks to the Joe-Mint you advised. Never tried anything that seemed to draw the pain and draw right out so fast — and the way it helps soften callouses is nobody's business! Been able to get some extra overtime money — so what do you say, let's go dancing tonight. You can step on my Joe-Mint for me, can't you?

CHAPTER XXVI

Kay was ready and waiting when Ronnie called shortly after nine that night. She was glad she had yielded to his insistent invitation. All work and no play . . . She was wearing the misty green crepe gown Ronnie liked best. It suited her somehow. Just a slim green sheath, with her tawny head perched like a bloom at the top of it and the exotic lei of gardenias. She had seen necklaces of tropical flowers in pictures, worn by women who took fortune and fantasy as a matter of course. She had even considered weaving one of old-fashioned flowers from the tangled garden, but somehow the picture had been incongruous.

The heavy swimming perfume of the gardenias was like a drug, Langorous. After the swift pace of National's promotion department she could use a bit of languor.

The undisguised flash of admiration on the face of the elevator boy gave Kay fresh assurance, a new appreciation for the hours ahead of her. She said to herself, "Kay Kenyon, the Candy Kid of Somerset, wrapped in gardenias. Amazing!"

Ronnie's greeting was so spontaneous, so superlative that Kay wondered whether she might be on the spectacular side.

"Red!" Ronnie stood back for a general survey. "You look like I've never seen a woman look. You're a dream walking. You're the walking dream of every man who wants to share his life with a woman as beautiful as she is intelligent."

"Thanks, Ron," Kay said, moved in spite of herself. "It's just the old green dress you like and the gardenias!"

Ronnie went on feasting his eyes on a dream as she walked to a taxi.

"Uh-huh," he said. "Wait 'till you see what happens. This town is glutted with willing babes. A fresh number like you, lovely to look at, with dew on the petals, is news."

The taxi stopped. "It's too early for Stork or Morocco or any of the big parade," Ronnie said. "This is a between place for a few who can find their way around. It's a club. You have to sign on the dotted line. Two hundred and fifty bucks to join, but my college crew tells me it's worth it. I'm not boasting, Red. I'm just telling you how New York ticks."

"How your New York ticks," Kay murmured.

"What was that?"

"Nothing. Nothing at all. I was talking to myself. A very bad habit."

Inside the drab brownstone front Kay gasped. The lights. The color. The music. Pale moonlight. Deep blue. A spot of crimson like blood on the moon. Music, sensuous, compelling.

There were four people at the table in a far corner toward which a lofty waiter led them.

Two women. Two men. They weren't having fun. The men were smashing out cigarettes they had just lighted. One woman was making signs to the orchestra leader who bobbed at her from behind a screen of greenery. The other woman sat, with her head between her hands.

"Hi," Ronnie said, smacking his palm on the table. "What goes on? What is this, a tomb?"

The men stood up. Their eyes were glued on Kay. The woman who had been signaling the orchestra leader plunged at Ronnie. "Darling," she said. "We've been napping. Waiting for you. Drag up a chair, order me a Zombie, and let's play hands until it's time to go places."

Ronnie said, appropriating a chair from an adjoining table. "Try this one, Red. Parties like this, no introductions. No one remembers anyhow. It's up to you to get your bearings. Don't look so startled. These people don't wake up until eleven, at the earliest."

"I see," Kay said. She didn't see in the least, but it was the thing to say.

The woman who was holding her head roused herself. "Ron," she said. Her voice was thick, her eyes uncertain. "You walked out on me. You went away, Ron—what was it you went away for? You went away to find away to find? I know." The woman threw back her head. She yawned at the string of pearls around her throat. The pearls bounced on the floor. "Sorry," she said. Her head was weaving. "Waiter, pick up the pearls. Put

"em in my bag. Here's the bag. And don't hold out. The pearls are registered. If you hold out the gendarmes will be here tomorrow to throw you in the jug. Damn the pearls. A string of beads, a jug of wine beneath the bough . . . Ron, why are you staring at me?"

"I'm not staring," Ronnie said. "I'm looking. Maybe it's a good show, but I don't like it. Pull yourself together, will you, Duke? I get a headache, just looking at you."

The woman ran her fingers through hair that had been immaculately groomed, now tousled. "Where's that big blast from down yonder you were loading us with tonight?" The woman's eyes were roving the room, unseeing. Roving they focused on Kay. "So there you are," she said. "Up from the sea in gardenias."

"Why yes," Kay said. Suddenly she felt adequate to this strange situation. "The sea, the gardenias. What could be sweeter? Nine, no?"

Kay thought that her cordial acceptance of a situation would have a pacifying effect. Instead it was a goad to the woman who was not yet fully aware, but in a mood to be quarrelsome.

"I get you," the woman said. "Why are you staring at me? You don't like the cute little plaster I'm wearing. So what? I'm drunkie. So what again? So you're taking over. You're the smarty who takes the place of men who need jobs. Maybe I am drunkie, but I've enough left to know that women like you knock the hell out of women like me. What are we? Liabilities. We want to get our men, to hold our men, but what chance have we with a lot of office sirens scheming to show how clever they are, what a help they'd be in the house. There ought to be a law against office wives."

Kay shrunk before the vehement attack.

"But we're not the way you say," she protested, quietly. "At least very few of us are. We work because we must earn our living, because we have family responsibilities, the same as men."

"I'll bet," the woman scoffed. "And that, of course, is why you're being the big office executive, like Ron told us. You have to take a man's place in the world."

Kay said, "Yes," that's why I work." Then, with spirit, "But I like doing it. It's lots more fun than loafing."

"Noble sentiment. Suppose you'd never done anything but play? Suppose there was nothing you could do?"

"There wasn't," Kay said, "a few months ago. Anyhow, that's what I thought. Only dire necessity forced me to find there is a place for me in the working world, as there is for every one of us."

The other young woman adjusted the bodice of her strapless evening gown and yawned ostentatiously. "I'm dry as powder," she said. "Can't we have a drink and talk about something interesting?"

"Let's dance," Ronnie said to Kay. He felt uncomfortable.

WIDENING OF BUCYRUS STREET BEFORE COUNCIL

Body Also Recommends Seven Employees Be Placed Under Civil Service.

BUCYRUS—Widening and resurfacing of Mansfield street from the underpass to the West Mansfield street bridge, came a step closer to realization Tuesday night when Bucyrus city council authorized the finance committee to determine if funds are available for the city's share of the expense and to report at the next meeting.

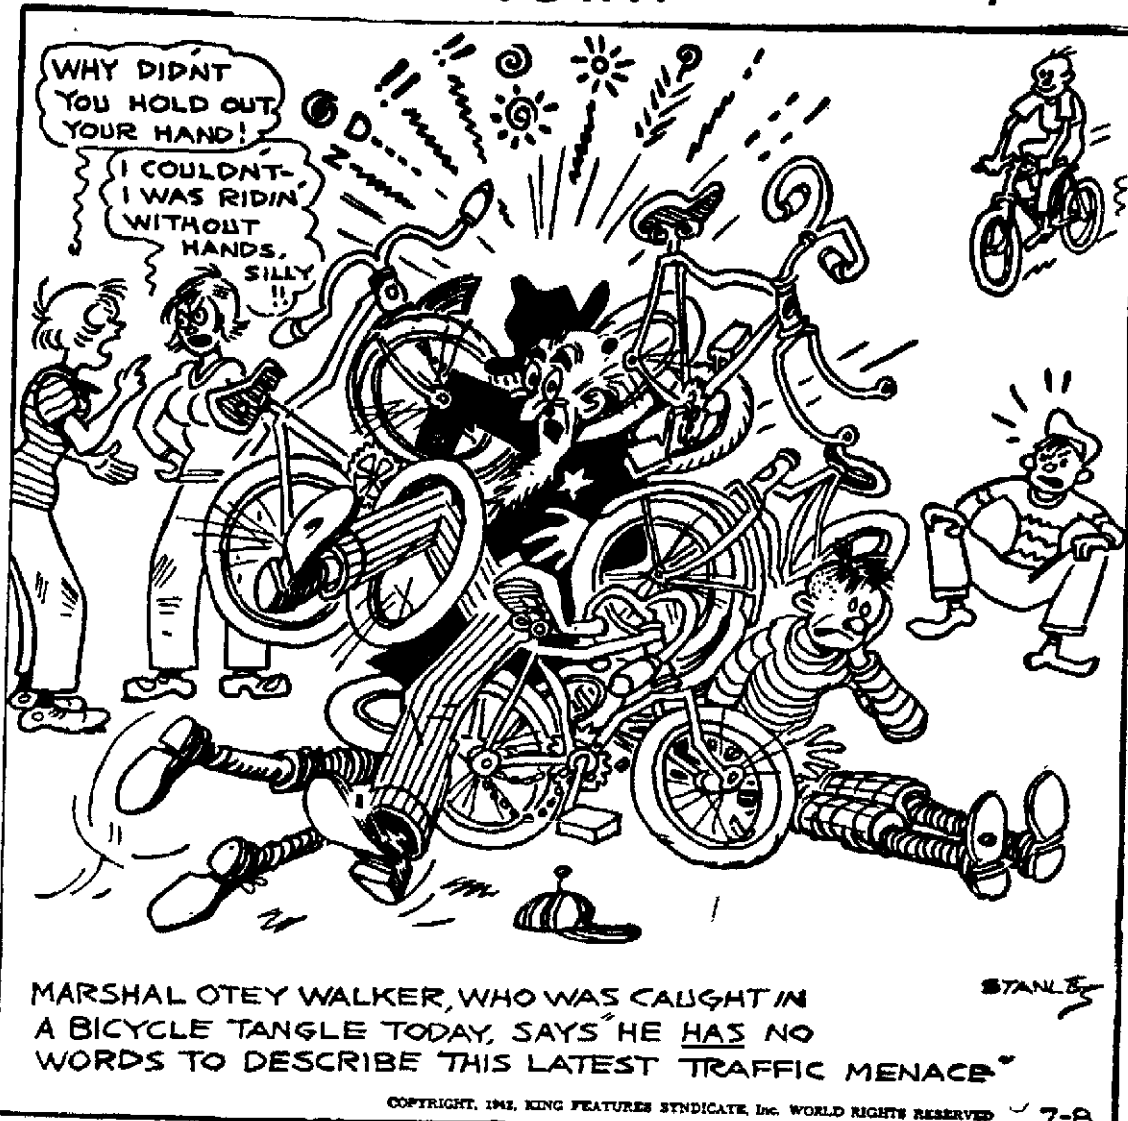

County commissioners have agreed to furnish $1,000 of the $8,000 set aside as the city's share of the expense, Mayor William F. Whittemore advised council. Of the remaining $7,000, at least one half can be financed from the gasoline tax revenue, Auditor E. C. Oppenlander stated.

Pressed by a representative from the international union of operating engineers, council recommended that the seven positions in the city water department be placed under civil service. The recommendation came after an executive session with the labor representative, Henry Wilhelm, from the Columbus office, who stated during open council session that he "would not be responsible for what happens at the water-works if the men were not given civil service jobs." The recommendation for making the positions civil service jobs must now be passed upon by the civil service commission, before becoming final.

In a financial report of activity at Aumiller park, Park Chairman Carl Light reported that receipts to date had totaled $2,381.55.

Public hearing on the 1943 budget was scheduled for the next meeting night, July 21.

$5,800 BUDGET GETS APPROVAL IN MILLERSBURG

Village Council Sees Decline In Revenue; Improvement of Street Authorized.

MILLERSBURG—The village council tentatively approved a budget asking for a total of $5,800 for general operating expenses for 1943. This is $167 more than was budgeted for 1942.

The amount to be received is estimated at nearly $3,700. What kept council from going in the red was inheritance tax received from two large estates. There is no anticipation of such an amount from this source for 1943. Inheritance tax for the last two years amounted to $1,500. Clerk Sam Franks, jr., states. Public hearing on the budget will be at the next regular meeting, July 20.

GALION BOARD HIRES TEACHERS

3 Employed to Take Places of Trio Leaving; Adopts New Work Plan.

GALION—Three more vacancies were filled Tuesday night when the Galion board of education met to complete their school staff. Those who were offered contracts included John Anderson, of Coshocton, hired for the position of physical education instructor and junior high coach; Janet Richardson of Marion, as general physical education teacher; and Ruth Miller of Columbus, as art instructor.

Anderson has been teaching at Dresden where he was head coach. He is a graduate of Georgetown college where he played football and basketball. His last year's record for his basketball team included 21 wins to 5 defeats. Anderson will be the third man in the Galion athletic set-up, assisting Jim Lympier and Robert Sheffer.

Miss Richardson will fill the vacancy left by the marriage of Mary Helen Welsh of Ashland, who was hired for the girls' physical instructor at the May meeting of the board of education.

As art instructor to replace the position left vacant by the marriage of Betty Zane Miller, will be Ruth Miller of Columbus, a graduate of Ohio State university.

The resignation of M. J. McQuirk, of Terre Haute, was accepted as instructor in the vocational machine shop.

Because of the emergency in local employment, the board of education has decided by resolution that the boys in the senior class vocational shop are to receive their practical work in industry this year. These boys will be given their academic and related subjects in the morning session of school in order to allow them to do their co-operative work in the afternoons.

SACRAMENTO, Cal. (U.P.)—The world's highest double-deck bridge, spanning the deep Pit river canyon above the Shasta dam site in northern California, is now in use.

The bridge, located 15 miles north of Redding, carries two railroad tracks on its lower deck and a four-lane section of U. S. highway 99 on its upper deck, 500 feet above the present river level.

Construction of the towering concrete piers was started in November, 1939, and the first steel was placed 13 months later. The bridge has an overall length of 3,585 feet, including short highway approach viaducts on either side of the canyon.
